The new morning show will debut later in the year with a new name, format and set — and signals the end of "Don Lemon Tonight" after an eight-year run. CNN did not announce any plans for how it will fill Lemon's primetime slot, which has long lagged behind Fox News' "The Ingraham Angle" in the ratings.

"There is no stronger combination of talent than Don, Poppy and Kaitlan to deliver on our promise of a game-changing morning news program," CNN CEO Chris Licht said in a statement. "They are each uniquely intelligent, reliable and com

- Russia's military will have to be rebuilt as a result of the war in Ukraine, experts say.
- The war has "dramatically" altered perceptions of Russia's military strength, one expert told Insider.
- Putin's regime could also now be in jeopardy, as it faces rare examples of dissent.

Over the roughly two decades that Russian President Vladimir Putin has been in power, he's dedicated a lot of time and money to building up and modernizing Russia's military. In the process, Putin garnered a reputation as a force to be reckoned with and was widely viewed as one of the most powerful leaders in the world.

But the war in Ukraine has decimated the Russian military that Putin spent years building, while raising questions about his grip on power, Russia experts and military analysts told Insider.

Russia's invasion of Ukraine has been a strategic defeat. So far the Kremlin has not been able to achieve its strategic level objectives and it has incurred significant costs. Russia's military is going to have to be rebuilt," George Barros, a military analyst with the Institute for the Study of War (ISW), told Insider.

"The conventional ground army ground force that the Kremlin has spent the last two decades on creating — seeking to create a modern military — that force has been just largely degraded and in a large part destroyed in the past six months of war in Ukraine," Barros added. "It's very true to say that the conventional Russian ground force has taken a significant beating in Ukraine. It will have to be rebuilt."
